

ABSTRACT

A novel device is presented having at least one electroluminescent element and a casing to house at least a portion of the electroluminescent element, allowing at least part of the electroluminescent element to be extracted from the casing and at least part of the electroluminescent element to be retracted into the casing.